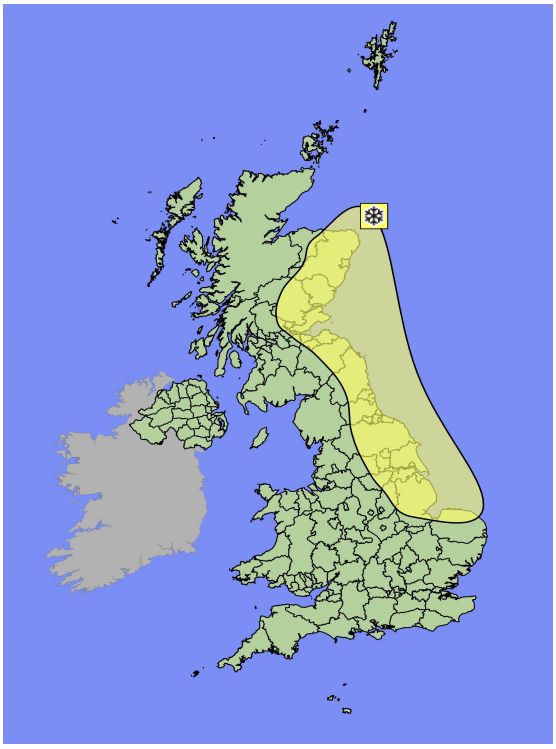
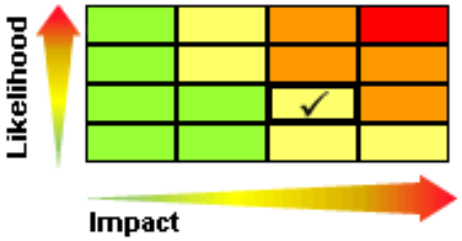
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal zone affecting southeastern and eastern England during Sunday is expected to clear eastern England during the early hours of Monday and affect northeastern England and eastern Scotland for much of Monday. This frontal zone will lead to some snow inland with accumulations of 5-10cm possible above 200m and in excess of 20cm above 300m or so. Blizzards are also likely over high ground in northern England and Scotland. Meanwhile, over lower-lying coastal areas, a mixture of rain, sleet and snow is expected so any accumulations here are expected to be small and patchier in nature. Strong easterly winds may also lead to overtopping of waves in some eastern Scottish coastal areas.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Snow

Valid from 00:05 on Mon, 21st Jan 2013 until 23:59 on Mon, 21st Jan 2013

A band of snow is expected to affect eastern and northeastern England and eastern Scotland on Monday. Over lower lying coastal areas accumulations are expected to be small whilst inland accumulations of 2-5cm are widely expected and above 200m in excess of 10cm is possible. The public should be aware of the risk of disruption to travel.
